
AnsaldoBreda wins a 32.8 million dollar contract in the USA

AnsaldoBreda, a Finmeccanica company, has won a 32.8 million dollar contract for the modernization of 27 light subways for NFTA, the Niagara Transportation Authority in Buffalo (New York State). The AnsaldoBreda offer has been deemed the best among four international competitors, within a project the target of which is to extend the effectiveness of this system of vehicles till the year 2035.

The new trains will be equipped with modern communication and control systems, including the electronic counting of passengers and the propulsion control.

This job order enables AnsaldoBreda to confirm the company's presence in a field such as the one of the light subways, which is more and more successful among local administrations.

Since 1978 the company is very active on the United States market thanks to the supplies for the cities of Cleveland, Washington, San Francisco, Seattle, Atlanta, Boston and Los Angeles

Recently, AnsaldoBreda has won job orders at Kayseri, Turkey as well as in Thessalonica, Greece, together with other companies of the Finmeccanica group; in Italy, it has obtained important contracts for the Rome and Milan undergrounds.
